

UNCLE SAM'S FAMOUS OLD BATTLESHIP, THE INDIANA, rounds out twenty-five years of service as a target for some underwater experiments with aerial bombs. The famous old Indiana and her sister ships, the Massachusetts and Oregon, were the first big gun battleships of the Navy. "Fighting Bob" Evans was the first commander of the Indiana, one of the four battleships which helped destroy the Spanish fleet off Santiago in 1898.

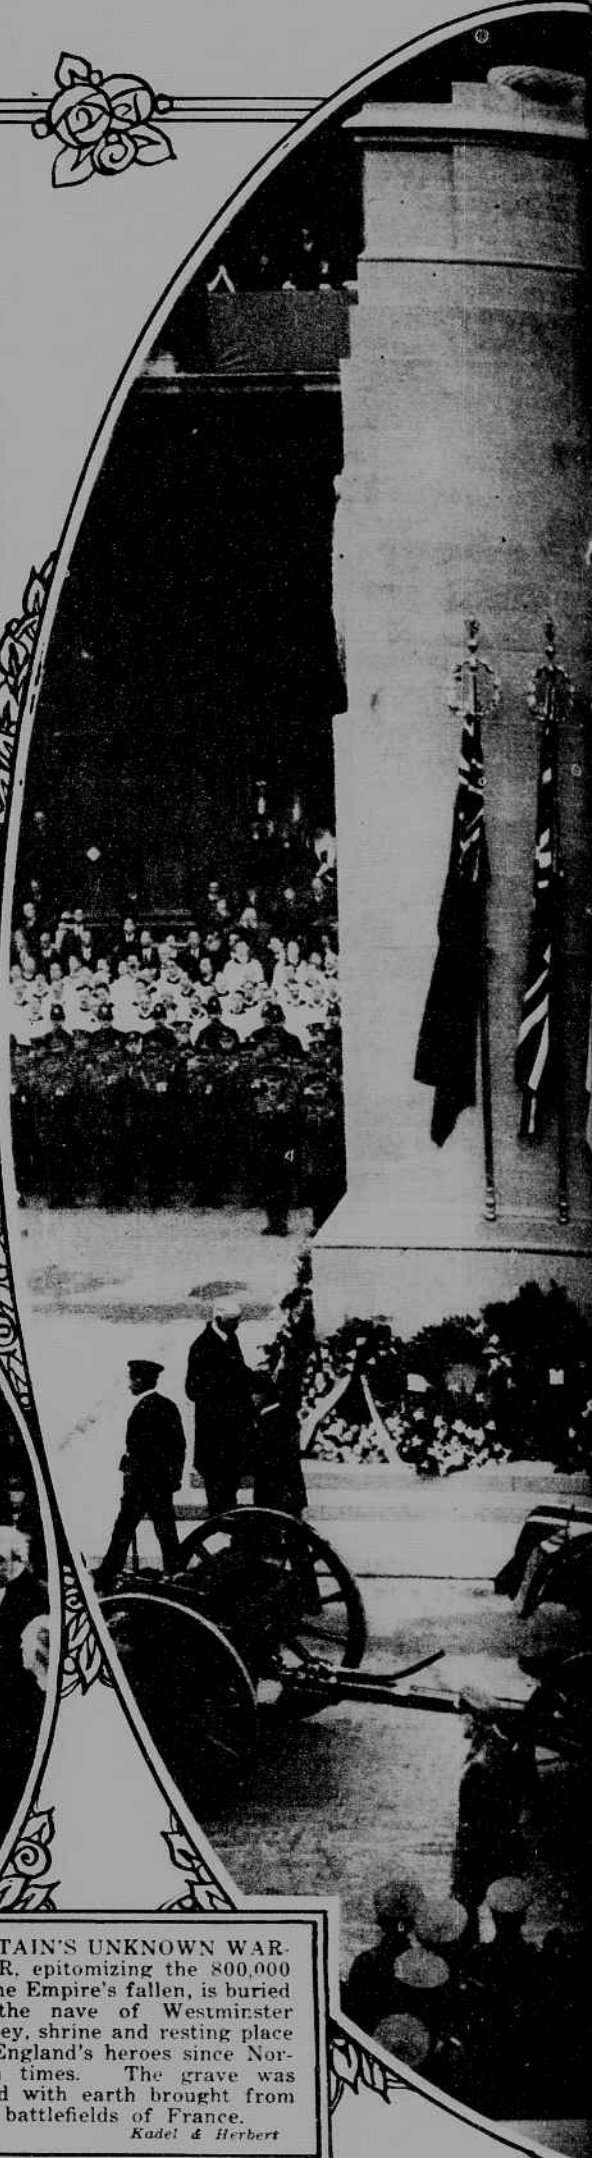

"HERO MINE." John H. Hamilton, of Los Angeles, just manages to get in this picture with his 725-pound bride, who was Miss Alma Seim, of Venice, Calif. Friends of the smiling couple say it was a mutual case of love at first sight. Some sight! Alma says, "When I was four I weighed but 165, and at 11 only 300. My folks thought I was going to be stunted, but I soon started to pick up. John told me he liked fat girls. Guess he ought to be satisfied now." We'll say so!

BRITAIN'S UNKNOWN WARRIOR, epitomizing the 800,000 of the Empire's fallen, is buried in the nave of Westminster Abbey, shrine and resting place of England's heroes since Norman times. The grave was filled with earth brought from the battlefields of France.

THE ANIMAL KINGDOM'S GREATEST ACTOR. A priceless orang-outang of the movies, who does everything from firing a revolver to acting as nursemaid for a baby. Here is the near human taking care of a trio of leopard cubs.

THE AFTERGLOW. One of the unusually interesting and colorful land and waterscapes by Astor Knight, now on exhibition at the John Levy Galleries. This particular canvas pictures the rear of the artist's home at Beaumont le Roger, Normandy, France. Mr. Knight is an American artist, and has just been made a Knight of the Legion of Honor.
