The riding test for the fat 'armchair colonels' has really turned out to be an endurance test for the army horses.

There is still a chance for some statesman to make himself famous by advocating government regulation of baseball grounds.

The Koreans will in time become reconciled to having their topknots cut off if the next reform doesn't make a cut a little farther down.

From his latest interview in New York it is evident that Henry Watterston got an awful bump when he fell off the Bryan band wagon.

An Ionia (Mich.) man named John F. Bible has been punished for contempt of court. This should be a warning for other men in the Bible class.

It is not quite clear why scientists devote so much time to experimenting with radium when there are said to be only a few ounces of it in the world.

At the sale of Lillian Russell's effects the other day one of her photographs brought $250. The collectors of antiques must have been enthusiastic.

The Boston Herald daily prints a column headed 'Queer Things Women Are Doing.' It must be quite a task to keep the matter boiled down to a single column.

'The brave man who knows how to die can never be a slave,' says the Baltimore American. But how is a man to know when he has never had any experience in that line?

'What is an affinity?' asks an Alabama editor. Merely from reading the papers, we should judge it is a bunch of trouble that wins no sympathy for the party afflicted with it.

While it is claimed that lithiolytic acid will cure the liquor habit, we fear an attempt to commit the name to memory will bring on an attack of delirium tremens.

The report that China is feeling very friendly toward us seems the more remarkable in view of the statement that during 1906 over $150,000 worth of pianos were shipped to that country.

The New York man who has been accorded the record for the smallest brain ever discovered was a watchman. He may lose the honor if they ever perform an autopsy on a stage-door John.

The stepladder who was paid $5,000 for painting the flagpole on the Singer building in New York has no doubt aroused envy in the breasts of some men who have found it hard to get up in the world.

A West Virginia man is going to run for governor just to please his young wife, but would he go through every department store in town to match a ribbon for her? There's the test that makes strong men quail.

Mr. Roosevelt says our hearts should be set hard as flint against predatory wealth, as well as predatory property. He will find very few men in this country who don't hate poverty of every kind worse than the average woman hates a wrinkle.

John Sharp Williams' declaration that he intends to devote one solid year to study in order to fit himself for his place in the United States senate looks suspiciously like a side-wipe at the house of representatives, where he has been for a number of years.

SMALL MAN TO THE FORE

This announcement by Hayden, Stone & Co., the Boston brokers, is one of the most significant and encouraging that has been given out since the slump in the stock market: 'Our house is buying every day far larger amounts of stock than it is selling, yet our obligations are steadily increasing. If this holds true of brokerage houses in general—and we presume that it does—it can mean but one thing, and that is that stocks in small lots but of a very large aggregate volume are being paid for and daily put away.

CAPTAIN HERBERT WINSLOW.

Captain Herbert Winslow, ex-commander of the battleship Kearsarge, is a native of Massachusetts and entered the navy in 1855. He belongs to the famous family of statesmen, soldiers and naval officers founded by Governor Edward Winslow of Plymouth colony, who came over in the Mayflower.

In short, the technical position of the market is quietly assuming great strength, and such breaks as we have seen this week are but the final outbursts which inevitably characterize a continued depression of prices.'

It simply means that the safe, conservative man of small means has stepped in and is taking advantage of a situation that will not only put him in the millionaire class, but, by his investments, small though they be, will restore stock to its real value.

It is the aggregate sum of these small investors—numbering thousands of working men who have each a few hundred dollars laid away, and living in all parts of the country—whose keen intellect and foresight is making possible the salvation of the stock market, when the wealth and influence of Rockefeller, Morgan, Perkins, et al., have dimly failed.

ARE WE NEAR THE BOTTOM?

There were never two panics just alike, but certainly the oldest habitue of the Street cannot remember any condition in his experience that would compare with the present, says the Boston News Bureau.

With good crops, high prices, and a world-wide demand, with labor well employed, with business in most lines only limited by the facilities to finance and transport, prices of securities melt away like ice under a tropical sun.

The more one studies the causes affecting all this, the more one is inclined to believe that the fundamental cause is more than money, more than legitimate liquidation, more than fears that we are facing a commercial depression and labor unsettlement.

There are those who hold the theory that the real cause for the extreme and persistent selling is the absolute lack of support on the part of financial interests that are in the limelight because of the policy of the administration.

It is held that these interests were enormous sellers of securities the moment that they convinced themselves that the president meant what he said, and that they have never since then had sufficient faith in the situation to become aggressive buyers of securities.

The market today is in a position where collateral values have shrunk to a point that taxes the power of some of the strongest interests to meet. To say that prices are way below values is to say what everybody knows, and yet the same could have been said long ago.

The question is, where is the bottom? That we must be near to that point is evidenced by the fact that prices are now down to a level that represents necessities rather than values, a condition which heretofore has never failed to attract the real money power of the country.

AMUSEMENTS

'Carmen' Every night sees a larger crowd at Dreamland to see the sterling offerings of the Spooner Dramatic company, and last night a larger attendance than usual was present to see the above named drama played. 'Carmen' is full of go and thrilling situations from the rising of the curtain to its fall. The stage settings are true to life and the scenery used is all special and the property of the company. 'The Smuggler's Retreat' in the Sierra Ronda mountains, in the third act, was one of the best, if not the best, settings ever staged here, a perfect production of this scene being possible only on account of the large size of the Dreamland stage.

In the last act a perfect reproduction of the Juarez bull ring was given, this scene having been painted on the ground by Mr. Spooner's artist.

Miss Allie Spooner as 'Carmen,' the gypsy, was grand, and gave an admirable interpretation of a character that is an extremely difficult one to represent. Bubbling over with vivacity one moment, kissing her undying hatred the next, and then softly breathing words of love to her lover the next, she inspires one with a feeling of dread, and yet there is always the something lovable and to be admired about her.

Mr. E. N. Wallow as Don Jose and Benton Hinton as the matador gave her admirable support, as did Miss Lillie Shrewsbury, who was a very sweet and pretty little Dolores.

This afternoon there will be a matinee at 2:30 p. m. and the play will be 'The Pearl of Seville.'

Tonight the company will present for the first time that beautiful drama, Blanch Walsh's 'The Resurrection.'

Comstock of the Washburn observatory, who has informed the observatories of the country of the exploits and discoveries of the youth.

MOSQUITOS KILL 250,000

Appalling Number of Deaths Annually Due to Bites of Insects

NEW YORK, October 25.—'There are 250,000 deaths annually as the result of mosquito bites,' said Dr. Edward A. Ayers, a member of the New York Polytechnic, at a meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Dr. Ayers said five diseases were directly traceable to the bite of the insect. They are malaria, yellow fever, beri beri, dengue and filia riasis. The government is eliminating the mosquito danger by draining swamp lands, he said.
