GIANT WARSHIPS LAUNCHED AT BOSTON YARD.

The new battleships are a part of the war armament of which the United States is now making provision. They are constructed at a cost of several million dollars each, and are intended to form a part of the naval forces of the United States. The new battleships are the largest ever built in the United States, and are designed to be capable of withstanding the greatest possible pressure of the enemy's fire. They are armed with the most powerful guns, and are equipped with the latest improvements in naval construction. The new battleships are expected to be ready for service within a year or two, and will be placed in commission as soon as they can be furnished by the government. The new battleships are designed to be capable of withstanding the greatest possible pressure of the enemy's fire. They are armed with the most powerful guns, and are equipped with the latest improvements in naval construction. The new battleships are expected to be ready for service within a year or two, and will be placed in commission as soon as they can be furnished by the government.