EDWARD TILDEN.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—His method of bookkeeping and his loyalty to the Democratic party alike were under fire today when Edward Tilden, bank director, packing house manager and corporation man generally, appeared before the senate Lorimer committee to testify that he was in no way interested in the raising of a fund to elect Mr. Lorimer to the senate.

Witnesses Confused.

Mr. Tilden was subjected to an examination of his relations to corporations. He mentioned that he was president of the National Packing Company and added the names of five other Chicago corporations of which he was president, besides being the head of concerns in other cities.

Not Proud of System.

The witness said he was not proud of his system, but that it answered the purpose, namely, that of keeping track of money until banked.

Advocates of Senator Lorimer had their hands tied before the senate committee investigating his election to the senate. They were told that they must testify for Lorimer.

Lawyer on Stand.

Rush Culver, a lawyer and lumberman of L'Arche, Mich., was the first witness. When the Lorimer investigation was begun, the committee had been told that Culver was a witness for Lorimer.

On his way to the state prison, whether he was taken after his conviction, J. J. Morris declared that he would elect death by hanging. "I will demand hanging instead of shooting," said Morris, "for two reasons. The first is that I want to put the state to as much expense as possible, and as the state has no gallows for hanging, it will cost something to build it. The second is that the building of the gallows will give a carpenter a job."

Under the verdict returned by the jury at 6:15 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, J. J. Morris must pay the death penalty for the murder of Joseph Wallace Axtell, whom he shot down and almost instantly killed on the afternoon of Tuesday, May 9, last, at the corner of Second South and Main streets in his mad flight to escape after having held up and robbed the Uncle Sam loan office, together with his pal, Sam Murray, who is now facing a charge of robbery. Morris will be sentenced August 15.

Asks Immediate Sentence.

As the clerk read the verdict Morris whispered to his attorney, and then springing from his seat addressed Judge Loeffelbauer:
