Federal Commander In Colorado Sends Wire To Wilson

Faces A Serious Situation--Interest Divided By The Coroner's Inquest At Trinidad And The Headquarters Of The United States Troops In Charge Of The Coal Fields--Strikers Determined Not To Surrender Arms To The Military

Denver, Colo., May 2.—Interest in the coal strike tragedies was divided by two dramatic centers, the inquest at Trinidad over the bodies of the women and children burned to death in the Ludlow tent colony and the headquarters of United States troops in charge of the coal fields.

Witness after witness told the coroner's court that the state militia fired the tents where it was known the women and children had taken refuge from the bullets of the machine guns. Mrs. Pearl Jolly, leader of the women in the Ludlow colony, described dramatically the attack upon the colony and its terrible results. On the witness stand she was calm, showing not the least trace of excitement. Her story was well connected throughout.

ried over the strike in his mines in Colorado, he showed no signs of it when he appeared on his father's estate, Pocantico Hills. Mr. Rockefeller reached there at noon and went into conference with his father at once. Later he went out around the estate and stopped to chat and joke with workmen. He strolled about unprotected and alone. He appeared to be in such good spirits that the workmen remarked it. It was stated positively that no extra guards had been placed around the estate at Pocantico Hills during the day, but there always is a strong guard at night.

Mr. Rockefeller is a member of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, which has just amalgamated with the Calvary Baptist church.

MEDIATORS ARE HALTED

By Gen. Carranza In The Negotiations

Won't Enter Pact With Huerta For Neutralization of Oil Zone.

SO WIRES STATE DEPARTMENT

Rebel Chief's Refusal Regarded at the National Capital as a Blow to Hopes of the South American Peace Envoys, Who Desire Suspension of Hostilities Between Rival Factions in Mexico.

Washington, May 2.—General Carranza, supreme head of the Constitutionalists, has declined to enter into any agreement with President Huerta for the neutralization of the oil well zone near Tampico. Carranza wired the state department of the stand taken by him in this matter.

Carranza's refusal is very important, as affecting the immediate situation at Tampico, but to officials in Washington it has a broader and more impressive significance. It is regarded here as a blow to the hopes of the South American mediators for any agreement between Huerta and Carranza for a suspension of hostilities pending an effort to adjust Mexico's internal difficulties. Until Carranza can be persuaded to modify his attitude, the real work of the mediators is likely to be restricted to the perfecting of a settlement of the acute situation between the United States and Huerta.

The reply received from Carranza was exactly what observers in Washington have been led to expect from the developments during the last 48 hours.

Carranza's attitude is all the more significant in lieu of the fact that Huerta was willing to agree to the neutralization of the oil zone suggested by the United States.

This government has been very eager to bring about a neutralization agreement for the Tampico oil fields. It desires this agreement to protect itself against contingencies which are certain to arise if the oil fields are attacked. The gushers outside of Tampico are owned by American, German and British interests, and the strongest kind of pressure has been brought to bear on the United States to lend forces for the protection of the wells. It has been pointed out that if one of these great gushers should be allowed to run wild and be fired, it might destroy all of Tampico. The oil, it is said, would flow down the river and cause a conflagration. These gushers have been protected with heavy cement caps, but nevertheless the danger is very real, so long as the Constitutionalists and federalists insist on continuing hostilities in the field.

OLDEST TWIN IS DEAD AT 93

His Brother, at Bedside, May Not Survive Shock.

HAD LONG LIFE TOGETHER

Last Family Reunion on Christmas Day Attended by Scores—They Were Both in Excellent Health Then—Remarkable Parallels in Life of Two Men—Each Had Eight Children.

Babylon, N. Y.—Samuel Muncy, one of the oldest twins in the world, died at his home here in his ninety-sixth year. Samuel and his brother William were born on the old farm in Babylon on Christmas day, 1818, and lived there ever since.

Last Christmas, when the twins celebrated their ninety-fifth birthday, they gathered about them at Samuel's home thirty of their many descendants, including sons and daughters, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. The twins sat side by side at the dinner table. On one side sat the children of Samuel and their children's children, and on the other sat the progeny of William.

Samuel was not in the best of health then, and he grew weaker and weaker, until he succumbed. William was at his bedside, and it is feared that the shock of his brother's death will be more than he can endure. The two saw each other daily and the companionship of the two was keen.

Both men were tall and stalwart. It was only until recently that they could not devote much time every day to some sort of labor. Together they took walks, and the friendship between the two was just as keen as when they went fishing or hunting together as boys.

The two men were proud of their health and longevity. They attributed their long life to work in the open air and abstinence from alcohol and tobacco. They never gambled. Both were ardent prohibitionists and argued hard for the cause. They voted for James G. Blaine for president, but since then they have been in the prohibition party.

The twins were descended from a long line of prosperous farmers. The farmhouse in West Babylon in which they were born is probably the oldest building on Long Island. The twins had two brothers and one sister, but they outlived them all by many years.

The twins married about the same time. Samuel married Rebecca Samuels of Babylon when thirty years old, and shortly afterward William married Mary E. Fleet of Brooklyn. They had been widowers for many years. Both men were blessed with eight children each. Up to a few years ago four of Samuel's children and seven of William's were alive. Just how many descendants of the two are alive today it would be hard to calculate.

At the time of their respective marriages each built a home for himself on the old Muncy farm. After the death of their wives the two went to live together, but they decided finally it would be better for Samuel to have his daughter, Mrs. Samuel Smith, with him, while William went to live with his son, Smith Muncy, near by.

The two men owned a great deal of property on Long Island. Both believed they would celebrate their one hundredth anniversary together, and they decided they did not want their children to wait for years to enjoy things, so they parceled out the property.

There was some talk shortly before their last birthday of hiring a special car and sending them to Washington to see President Wilson, but the twins felt they were too old to make the trip, and the project was abandoned.
