New York, Sept. 14—The United States battleship U.S.S. New York, which has been demilitarized and put on the Scrub Island of the Puget Sound, is being dismantled and the steel, copper and brass will be turned over to the American people to be used for the production of war material.

A half dozen of the battle ships were built at the Portland Navy Yard and are being used as a base for the production of war materials.

The New York was one of the vessels that were turned over to the American people at the end of the war, and is now being dismantled and the steel, copper and brass will be turned over to the American people to be used for the production of war materials.

The steel, copper and brass will be used for the production of war materials, and the New York will be put to the use of the American people to be used for the production of war materials.
