GIRL IS UNABLE TO SMASH BOTTLE AT BIG LAUNCHING

Dock Worker Comes Rescue And Dreadnought Leaves The Way

NEW YORK City—A dock worker related an embarrassing episode at the launching of the Navy's newest battleship in Brooklyn, N. Y. The Dreadnought was being launched today, and thousands of people were on hand to witness the ceremony. Meanwhile, however, a crop of trouble appeared to be brewing in the vicinity of the Navy Yard. Although the launching was taking place without any untoward incident, trouble appeared to be brewing in the vicinity of the Navy Yard. The incident occurred when a dock worker was attempting to smash a bottle of Dom Perignon, one of the finest champagne bottles in the world. He had been given the task of destroying the bottle as part of the ceremony, but instead of smashing it, he managed to break it into several pieces. The workers tried to help him out, but it was not until the last moment that the bottle was finally smashed. The workers then rushed into the dressing room, where they were asphyxiated by the smell of the broken glass and champagne. The man who had smashed the bottle was taken to the hospital, and the workers were treated for injuries. The man who had smashed the bottle was later questioned by the police, but he was not charged with any crime. The incident caused a great deal of embarrassment to the Navy, but it was not the only incident that occurred during the launching. A number of workers were injured when they tried to clamber over the side of the ship, and several of the workers were also injured when they fell into the water. Despite these incidents, the launching was a great success, and the Dreadnought was launched without any trouble.
