The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WARREN'S FLAGRANT NEGLECT INVITES HELEN TO A BASH BUTT FUTILE REBELLION

The girl next door was sick.

With a shrewd woman for a wife, with wealth so freely spent, with lovers who had spoilt some of the best, with the golden opportunities of a high position, and with the talents of an able husband, there was no need for these two girls to be in want. Helen and Warren had not only everything but much more. There was a certain sort of fun in her marriage. She had a young and handsome husband, who was a little carefree.

Helen is a girl of unusual charm. She is not only pretty, but also very kind-hearted and considerate. She loves her husband, and he loves her. But her life is not always happy. Sometimes she feels that she is not appreciated by him. She has a longing for something more in her life, but she does not know what it is.

Mrs. Warren is a very good wife. She takes care of the children and looks after the household affairs. She is a good cook, and she makes delicious meals. But she is not as interesting as her husband. She is a bit dull, and she does not always have much to say.

The marriage is not perfect, but it is not unhappy either. Helen and Warren are both content with each other, and they are both happy. They have a pleasant home life, and they enjoy each other's company.

There is a certain amount of tension in their marriage, however. Helen is not satisfied with what she has, and she feels that she could do much better. She has a strong desire to do something more, but she does not know what it is.

The marriage is not perfect, but it is not unhappy either. Helen and Warren are both content with each other, and they are both happy. They have a pleasant home life, and they enjoy each other's company.

Time marches on, and the marriage becomes more and more strained. Helen feels that she could do much better, but she does not know what it is. She has a strong desire to do something more, but she does not know what it is.

The marriage is not perfect, but it is not unhappy either. Helen and Warren are both content with each other, and they are both happy. They have a pleasant home life, and they enjoy each other's company.

The marriage is not perfect, but it is not unhappy either. Helen and Warren are both content with each other, and they are both happy. They have a pleasant home life, and they enjoy each other's company.

But the marriage is not perfect, and it is not unhappy either. Helen and Warren are both content with each other, and they are both happy. They have a pleasant home life, and they enjoy each other's company.

The marriage is not perfect, but it is not unhappy either. Helen and Warren are both content with each other, and they are both happy. They have a pleasant home life, and they enjoy each other's company.

The marriage is not perfect, but it is not unhappy either. Helen and Warren are both content with each other, and they are both happy. They have a pleasant home life, and they enjoy each other's company.