For the first time in five years Germany began to show some of the old-time interest in her painters and sculptors. Berlin holds a great art exhibit and Professor Schlichting addresses the opening standing at the base of the famous Beethoven statue.

The grave of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt in France at the side of the road of Chamery, west of Fere-en-Tardenois, and Mrs. Quentin Roosevelt and her little daughter, caretakers of the bit of ground sacred to all Americans. Lieutenant Roosevelt was killed in aerial combat with German aviators in July, 1918.

For the first time in five years Germany began to show some of the old-time interest in her painters and sculptors. Berlin holds a great art exhibit and Professor Schlichting addresses the opening standing at the base of the famous Beethoven statue.

The grave of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt in France at the side of the road of Chamery, west of Fere-en-Tardenois, and Mrs. Quentin Roosevelt and her little daughter, caretakers of the bit of ground sacred to all Americans. Lieutenant Roosevelt was killed in aerial combat with German aviators in July, 1918.

Roland Rholfs, one of the 39 successful pilots in the great international handicap race from New York to Toronto and return. He made the 520-mile trip from Toronto to Mineola in six hours and a half. Rholfs holds the unofficial American altitude record of 30,700 feet.

Left—Talk about poor Roman baths! Here's a modern one at the Fifth Avenue Public Library where street youngsters enjoy themselves daily.

Beloved Queen Marie of Rumania mingle with her country people and helps in the distribution of American Red Cross supplies. Little Princess Illyana is on the left, holding the bridle of her pony. Rumor has it that the Queen will visit America this year. Three bosses of the navy, Secretary Daniels, Mary Pickford and Admiral Hugh Rodman, commander of the new Pacific Fleet, from a photograph taken on the U. S. S. Texas in Los Angeles harbor, just after the ceremony at which Miss Pickford was made "Little sister of the Navy."