

With a wing clearance of only 15 feet, a 120-h. b. Nieuport plane successfully flies through the Arc de Triomphe, in Paris. Navarre, the famous French ace, was recently killed testing out a plane preparatory to attempting the same stunt. Below, to the left—Charles Godefroy, the French pilot, who daringly negotiated this remarkable performance. Reynolds View.

Little Miss Virginia Waibel, Brooklyn's charming four-year-old aviatrix, who made her second flight last Sunday. To the right her mother and on the left Pilot D. C. De Hart, of the U. S. Mail Service, who guided the plane. Kaplan Service.

Of course you don't recognize him in civies, or, as they say abroad, in multi. Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, commander in chief of the British Grand Fleet during the Great War—an interested spectator at a recent British agricultural fair. W. A. D.

Three photos of Beatty. Left—Beatty signs the guest book. Middle—Beatty is signing the guest book. Right—Beatty is signing the guest book by drink of the club's fare. Beatty declared a holiday for the future King. Beatty, Duke of Devonshire, Canada, the royal buildings at the city's highest honor.

The International Labor Congress in session at Amsterdam. Delegates from seventeen countries, representing 18,000,000 organized workers attended. Samuel Compers (X), President of the American Federation of Labor, and at the right of him the other two American delegates, D. J. Tobin and J. J. Hynes. Wide World Photo.

The spacious decks of the U. S. S. Nevada afford a splendid open-air ballroom for hundreds of Jacks and Jills during a recent afternoon dance given by the K. of C. and the Jewish Welfare Board at League Island Navy Yard, Philadelphia. Lodger Photo Service.

British troops from India arrived too late to participate in London's great Victory parade, so they had a special review of their own. A regiment of these dusky turbaned fighters is shown on their way to Buckingham Palace, where they were inspected by their Emperor, King George. Central News.

A score of 611 out of a possible 650 brought the National Rifle Association gold medal to Lieutenant J. A. Zimmerman, of Texas and the U. S. Marines, at the recent shooting championships at Caldwell, N. J. Paul Thompson.

A new photograph of Wilson, who returned home from the overseas war, cheered thousands.
