COMMUNICATED

Ominous beginnings of history we are laying down these days for our grandchildren to go through some day. For instance what do you mean when you say that D. C. Budge is filling appropriations for a power plant up in Logan canyon and that it is rumored that the Eccles interests are behind him. Do you mean to say that he is acting as a decoy for them or whatever you may call it? And is it possible that there should be water power somewhere that is not grabbed by corporations yet, while we have been sleeping, despite the warnings of foresighted men? Then by all means let our city and county pick up the crumbs which are left of the heritage of our children.

Talk about the feudal lords! Some day we shall have lords without whose will there will not a wheel go around in this country. It was with gloomy forebodings that the peasants of old saw a new castle built; we are going up over it in childish glee, it gives work. Work, hard work and plenty of it that is all we are thinking about.

The Roman slaves pitted against each other finally said: "If fight we must, then let us fight for ourselves." And we, when shall we see the light and work for ourselves and our children? Do we not know enough to run a little road or a car line? Then why do we poke fun at the old country people and pose as their teachers?

And after our beautiful scenery is turned over to the despoiler, the waterpower which our fathers provided for us and our children appropriated by private interests, while our officials throw in the streets for good measure without obligation nor a thank you; and after we have been turning our back deliberately to every chance of earning something collectively; then behold our little taxpayers scrambling around holding indignation meetings (with the cat in the chair).

HIS OBJECT LESSON

By CATHERINE CRANMER.

"Larry, have my horse ready at five today." As Harold Brentley spoke his attention was attracted by old Larry's unusual lameness as he started off toward the stables. "Hold on, Larry," called Harold. "What has got into your legs. Are you doing anything for that rheumatism?"

"Sure, Mr. Brentley. I can't see how medicine I swallow is going to help my legs, but old Doc Whitley says to keep on taking it."

"I'm afraid that cooking you do over there is none too good for you, Larry, why didn't you marry, and now you'd have a wife to take care of your aches and pains?"

"Well, Mr. Brentley," began Larry slowly and standing with his left hand on his hip and his right hand holding his knee, "it was just because I was too hard-headed to give in on anything, and while I was waiting for the girl to give in on everything she married a fellow that was so glad to get her he didn't care who give in nor how much."

"That is rather a vague explanation and a surprising one to me, Larry. I never found you hard-headed," Harold was curiously interested.

"But you never found me till after I'd learned a thing or two," responded Larry. "It's a long story, but if you want to hear it all I'll tell you."

"Go ahead, Larry," Harold smiled encouragingly.

"You see," began Larry, "Mary Glenn and me was the same as engaged, and I was so jealous I didn't want her to dance with the other fellows. She was a girl with as many ways of smiling as a mocking bird has of singing, and, of course, the fellows flocked around her. One evening I got mad 'cause she danced three times with the same fellow, and I guess I took a nip more than was good for my temper, and on the way home I laid down the law to Mary. She didn't get riled, but she said, just as calm as you please: 'Whenever you get ready to quit bullying me and to let drink alone as much as you want me to let the other boys alone, then I'll be ready to give in about anything in reason. There's got to be giving in on both sides, or we don't keep company any more, and that's all I've got to say.' It was all she did say, too, and my storming around about a girl trying to interfere with a man's personal liberty didn't draw one word from her. When she reached her father's gate she founced into the house quick as lightning and at Christmas the same year she married another fellow."

"And you, Larry—what did you do then?" Harold asked this perfunctorily to bring Larry's mind from the far-away past.

"Me? I sailed for America, and I've been here ever since. So," concluded Larry, "you see, here I am, with no wife to help me carry the load that comes with the years."

"Yes, Larry, I think I do see," said Harold slowly. Then he got up abruptly and went into the house. He closed his study door and went straight to the telephone. During the brief interval until he received a reply no visible muscle moved, but his face grew very pale and his heart pounded away like a stationary engine.

"Colonel Hunter's residence?" Then, almost instantly, "May I speak to Miss Eunice?" His attitude remained rigid as he awaited her voice in the receiver.

"Eunice, this is Harold. May I talk to you a little while?" The hand that held the receiver was trembling.

"There's a lot I'd like to say that could hardly be said over the telephone, but if I told you that I've begun to see some things differently would you let me come to see you and explain?" And Harold, whose arguments in court were noted for their directness, found himself floundering for words in which to present his side of the case to the calm-voiced young woman at the other end of the wire.

"Well, no; perhaps that is not exactly explicit. The only way I can be explicit is to say frankly that I'm ashamed of the attitude I took when we disagreed over whether I should dictate to you about your professional associates any more than you about mine." Harold almost embraced the telephone instrument as he added, in his most persuasive tones: "And, Eunice, you've made such a success as a social worker among unfortunate women, won't you undertake to set right and make happy one mere man whose mind is open to conviction and whose heart is starving for you?"

A very brief pause marked the birth of a blissful expression on Harold's face.

"You say 'Central' is not deaf? I'm not either, Eunice, and it makes me happy to hear that gentle tone in your voice. If I come by in fifteen minutes will you go for a long ride and supper at the Country Club?" The interval that followed was infinitesimal. "I'm on my way now, dearest!"

The receiver was still swinging on its hook when Harold went from the room and called to Larry:

"Never mind about the horse, Larry; I'm going out in my car."

"And you're not going alone either, or I miss my guess," chuckled Larry to himself, as he limped away toward the stables.

OKLAHOMA, OUR NEWEST GIANT SEA FIGHTER

The new superdreadnaught Oklahoma, which was recently completed at Camden, N. J., arrived at the Brooklyn navy yard to be made ready for an official trial trip off the coast of Maine. The giant fighting craft is still in the hands of her builders, the New York Shipbuilding company of Camden, and will not be turned over to the United States government until she has successfully completed her trials. It is expected that she will be placed in commission within two months. She is to be drydocked, cleaned and inspected before leaving for her trial trip. The Oklahoma is one of the most powerful warships afloat. She is a sister ship of the Nevada and has a displacement of 37,500 tons. She is expected to develop a speed of at least twenty-one knots an hour. Her main armament consists of ten fourteen-inch guns, carried three in a turret and two immediately above in a superimposed turret, and twenty-one five-inch guns. She also carries a battery of three pounders.

ADMINISTRATION POLICY PLAYED BY ROOSEVELT

Draws Parallel Between the Reiterated Diplomatic Notes and Micawber's Promises to Pay

New York, Jan. 30.—Theodore Roosevelt discussed, Promise and Performance in International Relations, before the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences in Brooklyn tonight. The former President's address in brief was as follows:

"Well meaning persons would be wise if they kept the analogy between public and private promises in view. The analogy applies to pacifist speeches; it applies to treaties; it applies to what are diplomatically called notes."

"It is an act of gross infamy" on the part of this government and this people to take any step which will help the wrong doers against the wronged; and such step would be taken if we imposed an embargo in the interest of Germany against the allies."

"Whether the acts (the sinking of passenger ships) were done by German submarines or by Austrian submarines, or, as is now claimed, by Turkish submarines, or, as many possibly be claimed in the future, by Bulgarian submarines, represents merely the contemptuous desire of Germany to give this government a chance to crawl out of making good its fine words. We took no effective action whatever to stop these repeated murders."

"The German and Austrian governments, through their accredited representatives in the embassies here, have carried on a campaign of the (Continued on page five)
