

M. Lemordant, noted French painter, receiving the Legion of Honor decoration amid an impressive scene. M. Tardieu, former minister of liberated regions, is bestowing the decoration. Lemordant was blinded by a shell explosion while on duty at the front. © Western Newspaper Union.

Mrs. Monroe Douglas Robinson in costume for the "Blue Bird ball," held in New York recently in honor of Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian poet. The ball was one of the most spectacular affairs of its kind ever held in this country. © Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Francis Fairchild at the "Blue Bird ball." Previous attempts for unusual effects, the rich jewels, gold and silver brocades.

First maneuvers of our newly formed Pacific fleet. Photograph shows the secondary defense of six-inch guns aboard the New Mexico, the electric ship of the Navy. © Kadel & Herbert.

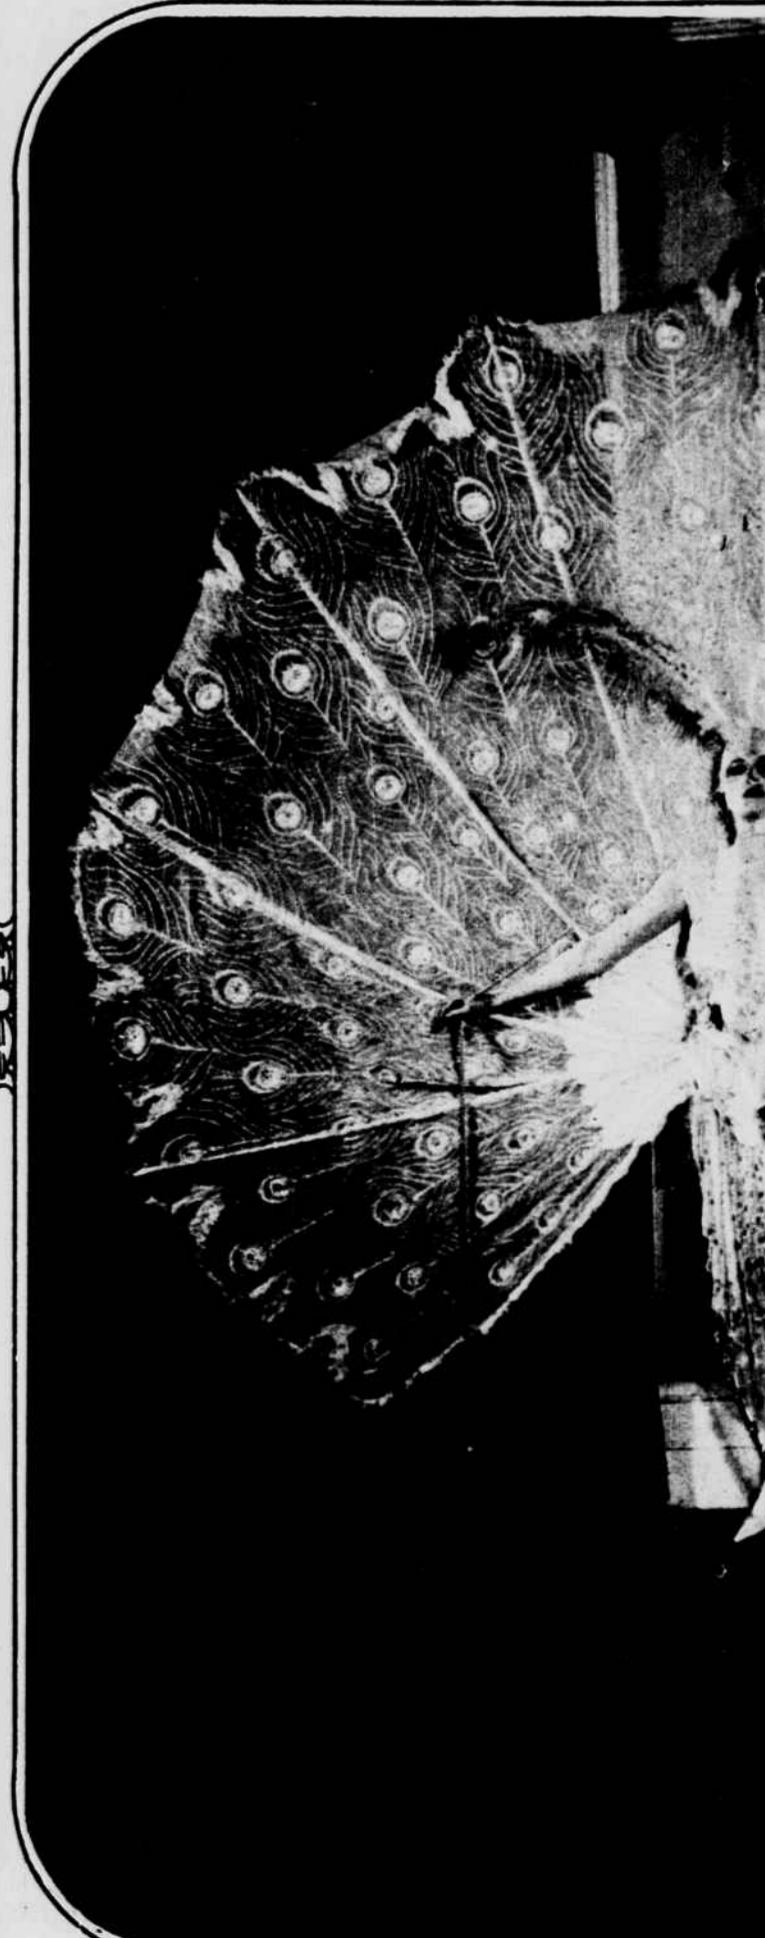

Among the many activities of the Knights of Columbus at Walter Reed Hospital are the community breakfasts. That the events are popular is testified by this snapshot at the K. of C. building.

Harry Goldstein, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Goldstein of Washington, one of the youngest expert drummers in the country. He has entertained the soldiers of Walter Reed Hospital on numerous occasions at the Jewish Welfare Board.

Bouffancy is the effect sought after in the newest dance frocks. This charming dress is designed of Nile green taffeta combined with lace. Tiny bunches of fruit are an added attraction. © Kadel & Herbert.

Dolores, stage artist, in brilliant costume for New York's "Blue Bird ball." The dress was made to open and close like a fan.