Y. W. C. A. CARNIVAL TO ATTRACT YOUNGER SET.

The attention of the members of the younger set is directed toward the Y. W. C. A. carnival this week. Indeed those who are busy planning for the event declare it is quite the most absorbing thing and if enthusiasm can be taken as a promise of success, the carnival to be staged on the tennis court of the Y. W. C. A. next Friday evening will meet the expectations of even the most exacting patrons. The maids and matrons will preside over the mystery booth, a place so fascinating that it bids fair to compel the attention and draw the quarters and dollars from the purse without pain to the purse holder. Those who will assist Mrs. G. Ben Stocks, who is in charge of the booth, are Mesdames W. J. Johnson and Bert Brown, Miss Jennie Warren and Messrs. William B. Fryor, Ray Lindsay, Dr. W. J. Johnson and G. Pen Stocks. The decorations will combine the national colors in a unique scheme.

INTEREST IN PLAY BY DOUGLAS GIRLS.

Considerable interest is apparent in the play which the girls of the Douglas Y. W. C. A. will give in the high school auditorium tomorrow evening under the auspices of the local association. The title of the piece "A Bolshevik Dream," has a timely note, and, according to the verdict of those who witnessed the initial performance at Douglas a few weeks ago, the work smacks little of the amateur. Snappy songs and dancing is a feature of the play.

A number of women will motor up from Douglas with the players tomorrow afternoon.

The patronesses are Mesdames Gerald Sherman, F. M. Hatter, J. E. Cull, T. L. Houston, D. H. J. andes, J. C. Wertz, George Bridge, C. S. Thompson, B. Tustin, C. F. Hawley and Haynie.

MEN OF RANK AND FILE ARE BOSS IN AMERICAN LEGION

Welcome, American Legion!

The bravest of American manhood, who gave of their time and offered of their lives that their country may be forever free and honored among the nations of the world, they have decided to bend themselves together for as long as they live in a great national organization of world war veterans.

The call for the first national gathering of these veterans of army and navy has gone out. They met in caucus at St. Louis, Mo., May 8, 9 and 10, a basis for a permanent organization of the whole of the country, and take in every veteran of land, or sea or air, those who got "over there" and those who could go no farther than training camp at home.

Lieutenant Colonel Theodore Roosevelt is one of the guiding spirits of the American Legion. He has given his time practically all since coming back from France to perfect the organization, and has been one of the leaders at the national meeting.

The first organization work of the American Legion was done in Paris when National Guard and Reserve oficers serving in the A. E. F. and several other organizations came together in an informal meeting and laid plans for the veterans' future. From the very start it was admitted that the men in the ranks, and not the officers who commanded, would be the controlling factors in the American Legion. It was intended to be so—a legion of men, rather than a legion of officers. It is the expressed purpose of the organization leaders to make of the American Legion a truly democratic body, and to dedicate it to Americanism.

But we may get a more exact interpretation of the Legion's purposes by reading the words of the temporary officers. They tell in the following articles, written exclusively for this newspaper, what the Legion stands for, and what it hopes to accomplish.

By LT. COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT

(Temporary Chairman, American Legion.)

The American Legion is a non-political, non-partisan organization which I am helping to organize. It is intended to perpetuate the high ideals for which our army, navy and marine corps fought so valiantly.

While it is non-political and non-partisan, that does not mean that after its permanent formation it will not adopt policies. It will.

By LT. COL. BENNETT CLARK

(Temporary Vice Chairman—Son of Ex-Speaker Champ Clark.)

The American Legion will follow in the footsteps of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans. Just as they perpetuated the bravery of the American people and a comradeship in arms so the New York State Committee of the American Legion.) I sincerely hope that all officers and men of the army and navy will enroll in the American Legion. It is a patriotic duty which will enable them to continue the fight against any forces of evil that may creep into our national life or threaten it in the future. The American Legion has several very serious missions to perform. It purposes to organize the patriotism of this country into a unit for the good of all; it purposes to continue to utilize the young men of the nation who fought battles or were ready to fight them; it believes that in the men of the army, navy and marine corps the nation has a bulwark which will ward off all things that are un-American.

By LT. COL. HENRY L. STIMSON
(Commander 305th Field Artillery, A. E. F.—Formerly Secretary of War.)

The future of this country for good or ill will inevitably rest in the hands of the great body of young Americans under 30 years of age who participated in the great war. The burden of the war has rested on them, and, on the other hand, they have received from the war the greatest possible stimulus toward a sense of duty and organized patriotism. It is the purpose of the American Legion to try to keep alive and carry on in times of peace that sense of patriotic unity and enthusiasm. The American Legion is intended to not only serve as a vehicle by which comradeship and love of country, aroused by the war, shall be maintained and kept alive, but intended also to embody the democratic spirit in which the war has been fought. It is open to all men who have worn the uniform in either the military or naval service, whether officers or enlisted men, uniting them upon a common basis of American citizenship and American purpose.

By CHIEF YEOMAN JOS. JACKSON
(U. S. N. R. F.)

What I like about the American Legion is its democratic spirit. The announcement that 60 per cent of its convention delegates must be enlisted men and that a similar percentage must prevail on all committees created a very favorable impression among service men. I believe the navy will be in it strong.
