The Wreck of the Maine—From a Photograph Taken This Morning After the Explosion.

The sack from the Maine is now on show in the rooms of the building on the main floor of the Stock Exchange. The sack is made of the same material as the one used on the Maine, and is said to have been found in the wreck. It is marked with the name of the ship and the date of her sinking. The sack contains a number of documents, including a bill of lading for the shipment of goods from the ship to the United States. The documents are said to have been found in the wreck, and are now being examined by the authorities.
