

J.C. MARTIN, Editor and Proprietor

"REMEMBER THE MAINE."

Young Mr. Leiter is said to have made $1,000,000 during the past few months raising war wheat.

Ex-Senator Gorman, of Maryland, is said to have cut his acquaintance with the democratic party.

Thomas Farish has taken another "pleasant mental purgative." Result, another column in the Courier.

The navy department is generally last on the list in the matter of receiving news from the fleet.

Admiral Dewey has named the captured Spanish gun boat Callao, and added it to his fleet at Manila.

It is too bad that all the fake newspaper correspondents are not in that Santiago bottle with Cervera.

Mr. J. Bryan was offered the command of a Missouri regiment, but said he cannot accept the offer at present.

Those eight men who sank the Merrimac in the entrance to Santiago bay on Friday last, corked the bottle that holds Cervera and his Spaniards.

If the Spaniards could only secure the New York Journal's staff of war correspondents and hold it until the end of the war nobody would mourn.

There would be very much less news abroad.

Newspaper correspondents at Washington are just now engaged in fixing up programmes for the conduct of the war and for negotiations for peace and then send them out as official.

That was a handsome compliment paid to General Grant's grandson, Algernon Sartoris, son of Mrs. Nellie Grant-Sartoris, by General Fitzhugh Lee, in the latter's appointing him to a position on his staff.

Chewing gum and cigarettes are two articles which should be made to pay a heavy war tax.

The users of these luxuries would no doubt be willing to have the opportunity to thus render material aid to the government.

Captain Sigbee, of the auxiliary cruiser St. Paul, must be a lively commander. Yesterday's telegrams told of his taking part in an engagement at Santiago the day previous, and of yesterday assisting in the capture of a big Spanish transport.

Another vessel in the Klondike trade has been wrecked. Up to date the casualties attending the Klondike excitement are greatly in excess of those of the war.

Snow slides, treacherous ice, whirl pools and sinking steamers are more deadly than the aim of Spanish gunners.

The Spanish are gleefully predicting that the Cuban insurgents will not be of much service to the U. S. army of invasion.

If the Spaniards were well informed they would know that our plans for the invasion of Cuba are not in any particular dependent upon the insurgents.

There are not more than 12,000 Spanish soldiers on the Philippine islands. By the time General Merritt arrives at Manila, to assume command of the troops and the military government, we shall have about 15,000 men there.

They will make quick disposition of Spanish soldiers.

Russia, which has always been very friendly to the United States, is just now getting jealous of the success which has thus far attended this country in the present war.

She seems very solicitous in regard to its final outcome, and is just now busy herself with other European powers to secure intervention to bring it to a close.

The treatment accorded by Admiral Cervera to the brave men who risked their lives today to close the entrance to Santiago harbor, shows that he is not devoid of feelings or of appreciation of heroic deeds.

He was so fascinated with the courage of these men that, under a flag of truce, on Saturday, he sent his chief of staff, Captain Ordoñez, to notify Admiral Sampson of their safety, and that they would be well treated until exchanged.

The daring of the brave men who ran the Merrimac into the channel at the entrance to Santiago bay, excited the admiration of Admiral Cervera. Under a flag of truce, he sent word to Admiral Sampson on Saturday that he would treat them with the greatest kindness and would exchange them for Spanish prisoners.

Patriotism is alive in the country today.

Chauncey M. Dewey is opposed to colonial expansion by this government. The majority of the American people, we believe, are in favor of it.

The increase in the gold currency of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30th, will exceed $150,000,000. This will break the record.

The Spaniards counted fourteen vessels out of the four which engaged in target practice the other day at Santiago, using the Spanish war ships and forts as targets.

Col. W. A. Stone, member of congress from Allegheny, was nominated for governor of Pennsylvania yesterday. June 2 John W. Weaver of Philadelphia was a good second. Stone was Quay's choice.

The Pacific mail steamship China has been given American register by congress. The vessel has been chartered to carry troops to the Philippine Islands.

Manila was formerly spelled with two "ll's," thus—Manilla. An exchange explains the reason for the present way of spelling—Manila—being from the fact Dewey knocked "ll" out of it.

If the Spanish navy was one half as formidable as the alarming reports sent out by the Spaniards, it would no doubt prove a source of some worry to our naval men. So far, however, these reports have proven the most dangerous part of it.

Sagasta says that Spain will fight to the bitter end. This assertion was entirely unnecessary as it has been pretty generally known that the end of this war will be pretty bitter to Spain.

The Journal-Murphy opposes the election of the board of control by the people.—Courier. The above is a falsehood, pure and simple and unadulterated. The question of the election of the board of control has never been discussed by the so-called Journal-Murphy, hence it could not have opposed such a proposition.

When the press dispatch boats visited the different vessels, which took part in the Santiago engagement, the words Commander Bob Evans, of the Iowa, yelled to the correspondents was, "The Spaniards didn't hit a d-d thing but the ocean, and would have missed that if it had not been so big."

If the telegraphic reports are true W. J. Bryan has been assigned to a duty by the administration which will give him splendid opportunities to distinguish himself.

The subjugation of the outlying islands of the Philippines will afford him an excellent opportunity to display his military prowess.

A Madrid telegram tells of the way the news of the Santiago fight was received there as follows: In the senate, Count Valencia asked if the news of the American repulse at Santiago de Cuba was official.

The minister of marine, Capt. Aunon, replied affirmatively, adding: "The news is a good augury for further victories which the courage and high merit of our sailors gives reason to hope for."

The senate then very quickly "noted with satisfaction the brilliant victory of the Spanish fleet."

Talk about the American fleet being, or ever having been, hampered by the board of strategy is the sheerest nonsense. Ever since the presence of the Spanish squadron on this side of the Atlantic, Sampson and Schley have had orders to capture or destroy it, and they have both used the greatest vigilance in an attempt to carry out orders.

The trouble has been that Cervera's fleet being composed of swifter vessels than our heavy battleships, the Spanish Admiral has been able to elude them. The only thing the strategy board has to do with our squadron has been to keep them as well informed as possible in regard to the movements of the enemy.

At a meeting of a Presbyterian assembly at Omaha, a motion was made that a certain evening be given over to prayer for the success of American arms in the war with Spain, when Dr. John A. Wilson, of Mansfield, Ohio, created something of a sensation when he declared that there had been too much "gush" already over the American flag, and that it was not especially indicative of patriotism.

The remark precipitated a sharp discussion aimed at the unpatriotic member and the motion was adopted. A minister possessed of no more patriotism than the above should be unlooked for as no man can be a true Christian whose soul is not warmed up by the love of country.

A man devoid of patriotism is not susceptible of enjoying any of the higher and nobler attributes requisite for a true man.

There are some people who seem to think Arizona is the only place where people are victimized by war rumors which have no foundation.

Some even go so far as to blame the papers, which pay dearly for their telegraph service for being responsible for this condition of affairs or claim that their sources of information are not reliable.

The fact is that the same sorts of rumors that are received by telegraph in Prescott and in Arizona generally form a part and parcel of the general telegraphic reports sent out all over the country and which led the Buffalo (N. Y.) Evening News recently to say: "If Admiral Sampson could only bottle up the inventors of wild and unprofitable rumors there would be some chance of passing in quiet slumber an occasional comfortable and restful night. This wondering continually what new story will come with the morning papers is more than a hard working people can stand."

The Spanish bark Maria Dolores of Bilbao, was captured off Havana May 31.

AN EDITOR'S PATRIOTIC UTTERANCES.

Colonel Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, delivered a very patriotic address recently on the occasion of the departure of Kentucky troops for the war. In the course of his speech he said: "I believe in this war, I believe in it with all my mind and with all my soul. If ever there was a justifiable war, it is this. Though it should rob me of lives that are dearer to me than my own life, I shall believe it conceived in a holy spirit, sanctioned by heaven, and directed to the advancement and the enlargement of a benign civilization."

"In these warlike spectacles everywhere manifest, it has already united us as nothing else could have united us—emancipating both sections of the Union from the mistaken impression that we ever were or could be anything else than one people."

"In the nature of the case, but few of you can hope to attain great commands or to acquire exceptional distinction. In the end, most of you must lay aside your uniforms and resume the habiliments of civil life: But there is not one of you who cannot do his duty, and doing his duty cannot but be proud and happy. A neighbor of mine came to me the other day to ask me to exert my supposed influence in getting his son a commission. I assured him that I had no influence."

"But," I said, "I have two sons carrying muskets in the ranks—sons whom I dearly love, but for whose advancement I shall not put forth the slightest effort. It is enough for me to know that they are serving their country, and if it pleases God to bring them back to their mother and me safe and sound, I shall bless His name as long as I live."

"In that prayer, let me include each and every one of you; though I would rather see my boys, and each and every one of you lying by the side of that brave and lively sailor lad whom North Carolina has just given up as heaven's first sacrifice upon the altars of the nation and mankind, than that one feather should be plucked from the eagle's wing, or a syllable of reproach be justly cast upon the name and fame of our dear Kentucky."

"I have no doubt that just as soon as President McKinley can get the time he will issue an order in accordance with an elaborate opinion prepared by Attorney General Griggs, declaring that the government printing office never was legally under the civil service rules, because it belongs under the legislative, and not the executive branch of the government. The civil service law is one of the greatest frauds ever perpetrated upon the government. It is a two-edged sword which cuts both ways. Its object primarily was for the retention of competent and experienced men in office regardless of their politics, and regardless of changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is of itself anti-republic and monarchical in principle. Prior to the enactment of the law, there was an unwritten law in force whereby employes possessing special ability for filling certain positions were retained and it was not an uncommon thing for men to hold their positions in the departments through changes of administration. This legislation a man in public office for life is