

Real Heroes Of Titanic Are Unsung Says Berger

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 29.—The real heroes of the Titanic tragedy went down to their death unaided—and the millionaires are getting so much credit that nobody has been paying any attention to the "poor devils" on the Leviathan," said Representative Victor L. Berger, the Wisconsin socialist, today.

"There are now plenty of bills before congress to safeguard ocean travel—just because the wealthy class was hurt," Berger continued. "Until a crowd of millionaires are affected we will never get safety appliances on boats, on railroads or in the mines."

"Disasters almost as appalling as the Titanic happen nearly every day in the industrial world."

Lumber, Milling, Hazardous

(By United Press Lensed Wire.) OLYMPIA, April 29.—Work of the class known as "lumber and milling" ranks first among the industries of Washington as a hazardous occupation, according to figures which today have been published by the state industrial insurance commission. Of the 73 deaths occurring in Washington since October 1, 1911, when the workingmen's compensation law went into effect, until April 15, 1912, 39 have been among men employed in "lumber and milling."

Coal mining is second on the list with 10 fatalities, the powder works class being third with eight deaths.

Crew Faces Death When Submarine Breaks Record on Her Trial Plunge

PHOTOGRAPH OF THE SUBMARINE CARP AND A SKETCH SHOWING HOW SHE APPEARED AT THE SURFACE ON HER UPWARD PLUNGE AFTER HER RECORD DIVE IN WHICH HER CREW NARROWLY ESCAPED DEATH.

Unmindful of their plight, eight men in charge of Ensign Simian Smith, U. S. N., stood drinking wine and eating turkey sandwiches, facing a tragic death in the new submarine "Carp #1," which was held fast to the bottom of San Francisco bay on her trial plunge, 200 feet below the surface.

The anchor chain of the submarine had become entangled in a cable dropped from a lighter, and not until a telephone message was sent through the projectoscope of the Carpentier, warning them of their predicament did any of the men realize their peril.

In an instant they were cutting the chain.

This done, the submarine released from its anchor, it still made no upward progress. Then it was discovered that another cable had entangled her.

Then the last means of raising the vessel was resorted to. The pumps began to empty the water tanks. After the tanks had discharged 26 tons of water the vessel gained great headway as it reached the top.

As the nose of the submarine appeared above the surface, the vessel took a sudden lurch and the eight men were thrown helter-skelter. Champagne glasses and bottles were dashed against the sides of the vessel.

Nose first, the Carp shot out of the water like a giant whale until the vessel stood upright with more than 80 feet of its hull in plain view.

Slowly it righted itself, the engines were started and the submarine glided to its moorings.

Miraculous was the escape of the eight men. Several of them were slightly bruised, and all were badly shaken up.

The Carp was undamaged.

In telling of the experience, Ensign Smith said:

"The dive was the deepest that any submarine has taken. We or-colored light."

"Yes."

"Mrs. Hale, was the table on which the necklace lay in line with any light outside?"

"I think probably with the direct ray of an electric globe shining through the farther window."

"Then, Mr. Greene," said Average Jones, "the glint of the fire-blue stones undoubtedly caught your eye. You seized on the necklace and carried it out on the fire-escape balcony, where the cool air or the milk driver's hail awakened you. Have you not recollection of seeing such a thing?"

"Not the faintest, unhappily."

"Then he must have dropped it to the ground below," said Kirby.

"I don't think so," controverted Jones slowly. "Mr. Greene must have been clinging to it tenaciously when it swung and caught against the railing, stripping off the three end stones. If the whole necklace had dropped it would have broken up fine, and more than three stones would have returned to us in reply to the advertisements. And in that case, too, the chances against the end stones alone returning, out of all the thirty-six, are too unlikely to be considered. No, the fire-blue necklaces never fell to the ground."

"It certainly didn't remain on the balcony," said Kirby. "It would have been discovered there."

"Quite so," assented Average Jones. "We're getting at it by the process of exclusion. The necklace didn't fall, it didn't stay. Therefore"—he looked inquiringly at Mrs. Hale.

"It returned," she said quickly.

"With Mr. Greene," added Average Jones.

"I tell you," cried that gentleman vehemently, "I haven't set eyes on the wretched thing."

"Agreed," returned Average Jones, "which doesn't at all affect the point I wish to make. You may recall, Mr. Greene, that in my message I asked you to pack your suitcase exactly as it was when you left the hotel, with it on the morning of August seventh."

"I've done so with the exception of the conjurer's chain, of course."

"Including the dressing-gown you had on, that night, I assume. Have you worn it since?"

"No. It hung in my closet until yesterday, when I folded it to pack. You see, I—I've had to give up the road on account of my unhappy falling."

"Then permit me," Average Jones stooped to the dress-suit case, drew out the garment and thrust his hand into its one pocket. He turned to Mrs. Hale.

"Would you—er—mind—er—leaning over a bit," he said.

She bent her dainty head, then gave a startled cry of delight as the young man, with a swift motion, looped over her shoulders a chain of living blue fires which gleamed and glistened in the sunlight.

"They were these all the time," she exclaimed; "and you knew it."

"Guessed it," he corrected, "by figuring out that they couldn't well be elsewhere—unless on the untenable hypothesis that our friend, Mr. Greene here, was a thief."

"Which only goes to prove," said Kirby soberly, "that evidence may be a mighty deceptive accuser."

"Which only goes to prove," amended Average Jones, "that there's no fire, even the bluest, without traceable smoke."

BLUE FIRES

"Plenty of replies came. You have, if I may say it without offense, Mr. Greene, an unfortunate reputation among hotel proprietors. Small wonder that you use an alias! From the Hotel Carpathia in Boston I got a response more valuable than I had dared to hope. An H. M. G. guest—H. Morton Garson, of Pilsilton, Pennsylvania (Mr. Greene nodded)—had wrecked his room and left behind him this souvenir.

Leaning over, Jones pulled, clinking from the scrap-basket, a fine steel chain. It was endless and some twelve feet in total length, and had two small loops, about a foot apart. Mrs. Hale and Kirby stared at it in speechless surprise.

"Yes, that is mine," said Mr. Greene with composure. "I left it because it had ceased to be serviceable to me."

"Ah! That's very interesting," said Average Jones with a keen glance. "Of course when I examined it and found no locks, I guessed that it was a trick chain, and that there were invisible springs in the wrist-loops."

"But why should any one chain Mr. Greene to his bed with a trick chain?" questioned Mrs. Hale, whose mind had been working swiftly.

"He chained himself," explained Jones, "for excellent reasons. As there is no regular trade in these things, I figured that he probably bought it from some juggler whose performance had given him the idea. So," continued Jones, producing a specimen of his advertisements in the theatrical publications, "I set out to find what professional had sold a 'prop' to an amateur. I found the sale had been made at Barsfield, Ohio, late in November of last year, by a 'Slippery Sam' termed 'The Elusive Edwardes.' On November twenty-eighth of last year Mr. Harvey M. Greene, of Richmond, Virginia, was registered at the principal, in face the only decent hotel, at Barsfield. I wrote to him and here he is."

"Yes; but where is my necklace?" cried Mrs. Hale.

"On my word of honor, madam, I know nothing of your necklace," asserted Greene, with a painful contraction of his features. "If this gentleman can throw any more light—"

"I think I can," said Average Jones. "Do you remember anything of that night's events after you broke off the bedpost and left your room—the meeting with a guest who questioned you in the hall, for example?"

"Nothing. Not a thing until I awoke and found myself on the fire-escape."

"Awoke?" cried Kirby. "Were you asleep all the time?"

"Certainly. I'm a confirmed sleep-walker of the worst type. That's why I got the trick handcuff chain and chained myself up with it, until I found it drove me fighting crazy in my sleep when I couldn't break away. That's why I slept in my dressing-gown that night at the Denton. There was a red light in the hall outside, and any light, particularly a colored one, is likely to set me going. I probably dreamed I was escaping from a locomotive—that's a common delusion of mine—and sought refuge in the first door that was open."

"Wait a minute," said Average Jones. "You—er—say that you are—er—peculiarly susceptible to

Wireless Hero Who Got the 'C.Q.D.' That Saved Hundreds on Titanic

THOMAS COTTAM, wireless operator on the Carpathia, who was working overtime when the Titanic's "C. Q. D." signal came through the air, and who worked night and day thereafter, proving himself one of the heroes of the great disaster.

Congress Picking Cotton Out of Its Ears

When the steamer Gen. Slocum burned in the Hudson river in 1904 and caused the loss of 958 lives, scores of the Lutheran church went to their deaths.

The steamer was carrying a crowd of people to a Lutheran picnic. The great loss of life was due to lack of life preservers and lifeboats.

Ever since that disaster the Lutheran church has been pleading with congress to do something to protect travelers on ocean, lake and river vessels. Both houses have been flooded with petitions, which have been carefully filed for reference.

Today congress is wrought up almost to hysteria over the Titanic disaster. Protection is promised. Laws requiring life preservers and lifeboats are to be speedily enacted.

This is as it should be, but—

If congress had not been deaf to the earnest appeals of the Lutherans for eight years the Titanic tragedy WOULD NOT HAVE HAPPENED.

Fifteen hundred more lives had to be sacrificed before congress got the cotton out of its ears.

Sulphurro

Nature's Great Purifier Adapted to the Human System

Sulphur is Dame Nature's great cleanser and purifier. Sulphurro is Sulphur held in complete solution. Sulphurro's curative properties are proving of wonderful power. Sulphurro cleanses the system and purifies it as no other agency has yet succeeded in doing.

For generations the beneficial properties of Sulphur have been known in a limited way. Taken in a powder, it coats the intestines and retards circulation rather than improving the system's activities; while the Sulphur in Sulphurro is in complete solution and can be absorbed directly into the blood, purifying it and so restoring normal circulation.

Once in the blood, Sulphurro acts upon the impurities and harmful elements. The germs of disease cannot live, and the poisons are driven out of the body.

Sulphurro has cured thousands and thousands of persons up the Pacific Coast, and to the Eastward, of a multitude of diseases traceable to impurities in the blood. This statement is attested by the hundreds of letters on file in Sulphurro's offices, and by the observations of Mr. Stewart, who for a year distributed it free to a multitude of people.

For best results directions must be followed. Send for 32-page booklet, mailed free on application. Read it carefully.

Sulphurro is on sale by all druggists in 50-cent and $1.00 bottles.
