The S. S. Patricia of the German merchant fleet at anchor in the English Channel. A U. S. submarine chase is about to put aboard an American crew to bring her to this country. The Patricia made a safe landing in Boston last week with a cargo of Yanks, after being unsuccessfully fired at by an agent of the Hamburg-American Line.

One of the war's smallest heroes, awarded the D. S. C. by Gen. Pershing, is Cher Ami. In spite of the loss of an eye this homing pigeon succeeded in carrying to head quarters messages from the "Lost Battalion.

A steel sea monster, amphibious and formidable, is Uncle Sam's newest submarine just home from war duty. The great fin rudders stabilize the boat under water and assist in speedy submerging. They fold up snugly against the sides when the "sub." is under way.

The 31st Infantry, U. S. A., marches on a practice hike through the bleak Siberian countryside around Vladivostok.

Hundreds of "Hello" girls pour into the street from the Tremont Temple, in Boston, after a mass meeting of New England's telephone girls. Their strike against the Burleson régime seriously tied up the wires of the New England states.